

My Words Stand

How many times do I need to say something before it becomes truth? I have to say it only once, for My words stand. For what I have spoken, must come to pass. What have I spoken to you? What have I declared to the world? Will it not come to pass? For The schemes of man do not challenge My word, My truth, and My rule. For if you choose to believe me, you choose wisely. For once I have spoken, who else can challenge it? Follow My words in this time and I will prove to you, to the world, and to those in heavenly places, that I alone am God.

Evil will increase, but My grace and My truth will be raised as a standard. So know that when evil words are spoken, then I will raise you to declare My truth.

Pause to give thanks. Pause to give ear to My words. Pause to remember what I have spoken to you. Count the Omer. Today begins another round of cleansing in your life to remove the distractions and confusions, the fears and the doubts, the unprofitable things that occupy your mind and your time. Rejoice, so this is a short but powerful season of truth, freedom, and revelation. Words spoken now will have a lasting impact moving forward. Agree with Me and prophecy your future blessing in My Kingdom. Today, call in My truth and My blessing and send out the distractions, fears, and doubting words. Script your future as a citizen of My Kingdom. Speak the coming freedom, the future victories, Align yourself will My thoughts and be transformed, for My words stand.